

Bangladesh Optical Cable Sheathing Material

AI Overview

Optical fiber cables in Bangladesh commonly use HDPE, aluminum, steel, and double-sheath constructions for protection and durability. Common Sheathing Materials

1. HDPE (High-Density Polyethylene) Sheath HDPE is widely used for both indoor and outdoor optical fiber cables due to its durability, moisture resistance, and UV protection. For example, RFL Group's Bizli Optical Fiber Cables use a black HDPE sheath, which protects the glass fibers from environmental damage while maintaining flexibility for installation.
2. Aluminum and Steel Layers Outdoor and armored cables often incorporate aluminum tape or steel tape layers to provide mechanical protection and electromagnetic shielding. FONSBD specifies cables with aluminum tape layers or steel tape armored loose tube cables, which are suitable for aerial, duct, or direct-buried installations. These layers enhance moisture resistance, UV resistance, and mechanical strength, making them ideal for long-distance and high-interference environments.
3. Double Sheathing Some optical fiber cables, such as the GYFTY53 model, feature double sheathing for extra protection against harsh outdoor conditions, including underground burial. This construction combines a primary protective layer around the fibers and a secondary armored or polymer sheath to ensure long-term reliability.
4. Non-Metallic Strength Members Certain cables use dielectric or non-metallic strength members to provide tensile strength without introducing electromagnetic interference. These are particularly useful in areas with high electromagnetic activity, ensuring signal integrity while maintaining cable flexibility.

Summary of Sheathing Applications

Indoor cables: Typically use HDPE or PVC sheaths for flexibility and fire safety.

Outdoor aerial or duct cables: Use HDPE with aluminum or steel tape for UV, moisture, and mechanical protection.
