

Dongya Cable Tray Custom Price List

AI Overview

The price of Dongya cable trays depends on material, size, load capacity, and customization requirements, with factory-direct and OEM options available for tailored solutions.

Factors Affecting Customization Price

Material Type: Cable trays can be made from fiberglass (FRP), polyurethane, steel, or epoxy composites. FRP and polyurethane trays are corrosion-resistant and lightweight, often preferred for industrial applications, which can influence cost.

Dimensions and Load Capacity: Width, length, side rail height, and maximum working load significantly affect pricing. For example, FRP trays can range from 50–1500 mm in width, 2–7 m in length, and 50–200 mm side rail height, with load capacities from 50 kg/m to 400 kg/m.

Customization Complexity: Trays molded into complex shapes or requiring special coatings, colors, or additional brackets will increase costs. Customization also includes special layouts, covers, or anti-corrosion features.

Order Volume and MOQ: Bulk orders typically reduce the per-unit cost, while small trial orders may have higher unit prices. Many suppliers offer volume discounts and flexible MOQ arrangements.

Supplier and Location: Factory-direct purchases or OEM arrangements can provide competitive pricing. Suppliers like Shandong Zhongjia and Yongchang offer direct factory quotes and can provide free samples, with shipping fees negotiated separately.

Price Ranges

B2B Industrial Orders: Prices vary widely depending on material and size, typically ranging from $0.80 to over $76 per unit for professional-grade trays.

B2C or Small-Scale Orders: For smaller or home-office applications, prices are lower, around $15–$34 per tray, with wholesale options available.

How to Request a Quote

Contact Suppliers Directly: Reach out to Dongya or authorized distributors to provide your specifications, dimensions, material preferences, and quantity.

Provide Customization Details: Include any special coatings, shapes, or load requirements to get an accurate quote.
