

Fiber Optic Cable RFID Management

Overview

Combining RFID (Radio Frequency Identification) technology with optical cable management can realize intelligent and automated management methods, greatly improving the efficiency and accuracy of cable management. Since data centers handle huge amounts of data, one mistake on a cable connection can cause huge trouble and loss. RFID can prevent human error and improve the efficiency in cable management. * The pocket type reader shown in this page. This invention relates to methods and apparatus for managing and automating the physical connectivity of optical fiber networks, in particular, automated systems to inventory, locate, discover and test a network with a large number of physical communication links comprised of optical and electronic. Fiber optic networks, with their ultra-high transmission capacity and stability, have become the mainstream choice in the telecommunications industry.
