

How much does a server rack cable management rack cost

AI Overview

Server racks with cable management range from around $200 for compact units to over $3,000 for full-size, high-capacity enclosures. Entry-Level and Compact Racks Small or wall-mounted racks with basic cable management start at approximately $189–$300. These are suitable for home labs or small office setups and often include 1U or 2U horizontal cable organizers or D-ring hooks for basic cable routing (CableTiesAndMore, Amazon). Horizontal Zero U cable management racks for 19" or 23" widths are available from $33 to $51 per unit, ideal for retrofitting existing racks without consuming additional rack space (AnD Cable Products). Mid-Range Server Racks 19-inch floor-standing racks with integrated cable management, adjustable rails, and locking doors typically cost $1,000–$2,500. Examples include the StarTech 24U rack at around $1,177 and Dell NetShelter SX 24U at $2,249.88. These racks often include vertical and horizontal cable management options, perforated doors for airflow, and pre-installed cable tie solutions. High-End and Large Data Center Racks 42U or 48U racks with advanced cable management, adjustable depth, and full enclosures range from $2,500 to $3,000+. For instance, the Tripp Lite 42U SmartRack is priced at $2,947.76, and Dell's 42U NetShelter SX with integrated cable management is $2,724.60. These units are designed for high-density server environments, offering robust vertical cable organizers, D-ring hooks, and airflow optimization. Cable Management Accessories Vertical cable managers for 42U racks range from $178 to $595, depending on the number of rings, finger slots, and width compatibility (Dell, APC, Vertiv). Horizontal 1U or 2U cable panels with D-rings or finger ducts cost $33–$268, suitable for organizing patch cables and power cords within a rack (StarTech, Rack Solutions). Summary Budget setups: $200–$500 for s...
