

Price List of New Energy Distribution Boxes

AI Overview

The cost of a complete set of new energy distribution boxes typically ranges from $200 to over $2,000 per unit, depending on materials, capacity, and included components.

Pricing Overview The price of a distribution box varies widely based on enclosure material, internal components, and system capacity. Basic plastic units for small residential applications can cost around $200, while industrial-grade stainless steel boxes with high-quality circuit breakers, surge protectors, and busbars can exceed $2,000 per unit. Commercial and industrial boxes often include advanced features such as smart monitoring, remote control, and digital displays, which increase the cost.

Material and Component Influence

Enclosure Material: ABS plastic, powder-coated steel, or 304 stainless steel. Stainless steel is recommended for corrosive environments like coastal areas or chemical plants.

Internal Components: Circuit breakers, fuses, surge protection devices, and busbars. A fully equipped box costs significantly more than an empty shell.

Capacity: Single-phase residential units are cheaper, while three-phase commercial or industrial units with higher amperage and multiple circuits are more expensive.

Specialized Options

Solar PV Distribution Boxes: For solar systems, complete units with DC/AC breakers, surge protection, and IP65 waterproof rating range from $150 to $500 depending on configuration.

Outdoor or Weatherproof Units: Weather-resistant enclosures for outdoor installations carry premium pricing due to durability and safety requirements.

Additional Considerations

Installation Costs: Professional installation is required for safety and code compliance, which adds to the total project cost.

Longevity: High-quality units can last 25–40 years, though internal breakers may need replacement every 10–15 years.

Customization: Modular systems, smart integration, and specialized labeling...
