

Price of removing fiber optic cable junction boxes

AI Overview

Dismantling an outdoor fiber optic junction box typically costs between $150 and $500 per box, depending on labor, access, and disposal requirements. Factors Affecting Cost Labor and Technician Time Removing a junction box requires a trained fiber optic technician to safely disconnect fibers, handle splices, and ensure no damage to the network. Labor rates vary by region but typically range from $50 to $150 per hour. A standard dismantling may take 1-3 hours depending on complexity and accessibility. Type and Size of Junction Box Outdoor boxes vary in size and material. Compact ABS or mild steel boxes are easier to remove, while larger, fully loaded enclosures with multiple splices or connectors may require more time and equipment. Access and Location Boxes mounted on poles, in trenches, or near traffic areas may require additional safety measures, permits, or traffic control, which can increase costs. Materials and Disposal Costs may include disposal of the box and any associated cable remnants. Some providers charge a small fee for recycling or hazardous waste handling, typically $20-$50 per box. Additional Equipment Tools such as fusion splicers, OTDR testers, and safety gear may be needed to safely disconnect fibers before removal. While these are often included in labor costs, complex jobs may incur extra charges. Typical Price Range Small, easily accessible boxes: $150-$250 per box Medium boxes with multiple splices or connectors: $250-$400 per box Large or difficult-to-access boxes requiring permits or traffic control: $400-$500+ per box Recommendations Request a fixed or not-to-exceed estimate from a certified fiber technician to avoid unexpected charges. Bundle dismantling with other maintenance or upgrade work to reduce mobilization costs. Ensure proper documentation of fiber disconnection to prevent service disrupt...
